Enz, Cathy A. & Near, Janet P. The Hospitality Change Simulation, copyright 1993

The hospitality change simulation was designed by Enz and fashioned after a manufacturing simulation developed by Near. The hospitality simulation was designed to give students hands on experience in introducing change into a hotel. Participants play the role of change specialists in a team based hands-on interactive simulation. The charge of the team is to get management level personnel of a simulated hotel to adopt a corporate change initiative, while taking into consideration the unique culture and resistance of hotel personnel. The learning objectives are: (1) to understand what drives change and the process of introducing change. The emphasis is on skill building around how to implement change, (2) to develop a sound change management strategy as a team and experiment with ways to introduce change based on step-by-step feedback, and (3) to discover how to manage reluctant managers and how to move them toward change.
